An Experiential Learning Program by Eagles Flight Asia

In order to succeed in business today, it is imperative to forge productive business relationships within the context of the corporate culture. While the pressure to produce results can undercut how we behave and interact with others, the quality of our working relationships greatly impacts productivity. In Eagle's Flight's virtual experience, Elk Manor, participants learn what it takes to do exactly that by metaphorically finding as many hidden gems as possible in the allotted time.

At the end of the experience, participants are evaluated on their ability to produce results and their relationships with others, which a skilled facilitator then uses to highlight what has been learned and how to apply it back on the job.
